Directors' Notes

Over the last few months, I've had no less than seven friends share that they were in this show in high school or college and that they adore it. To call Guys and Dolls a classic is an understatement. It opened on Broadway in 1950 and skyrocketed in popularity, running for 1,200 performances and winning the TONY Award for Best Musical. In 1955, the film adaptation starring Frank Sinatra and Marlon Brando was also a huge hit, and many musical artists have covered these catchy show tunes in the 70 years since they were written.

A post-WWII New York City is the setting for this "musical fable of Broadway." Everything is a bit more colorful, loud, and stylized. This NYC is based on the short stories of Damon Runyon, reflected in "Runyonland," our opening number that captures the hustle and bustle of a big, bright city overflowing with gamblers. Even with all the talk of the dice game, the real game here is love; the transformative power of new love (Sky and Sarah) is juxtaposed with the enduring love of Nathan and Adelaide.

Producing a vintage masterpiece can be tricky as there are some elements of Guys and Dolls that are admittedly problematic. Women are not "dolls" and should never be the subject of a bet, even in a comedy. Lying to loved ones isn't the punchline of a joke. Keeping this in mind, the production team has worked to create a show that highlights the best parts of this story: loyal friendships, the thrill of the game, and the compromise necessary for true love (along with plenty of laughter).

To my cast, crew, and production team--thank you for rolling the dice on this production! Theatre is a labor of love and you all have proven that your markers are worth their weight in gold.

- Lauren Tobiason
